

MORNING APPEAL

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27

EXECUTIVE ORDER.

WHEREAS, The hand of Providence has removed from our midst Henry C. Davis, Lieutenant Governor of Nevada;

Therefore, It is resolved that the offices of the several departments of State be closed on the day of the funeral (Tuesday, August 27th), and that the citizens, laying aside all business, attend service as a mark of respect to his memory, and in sympathy with the sorrowing wife and children and other relatives who mourn his loss.

Done at Carson City, Nevada, this 26th day of August, 1889.

C. C. STEVENSON, Governor.

By the Governor:
JOHN M. DORNER,
Secretary of State.

THE ELIXIR OF LIFE.

The curious feature of all that has been said or done in the past or present to find the elixir of life, is the yearning manifest in poor mortality to reverse the laws of nature and call back youth and its hopes and dreams long after it has fled forever. The impossibility of such a thing is impressed upon every tree and flower and yet men struggle to reverse the edict. The old alchemists struggle in their laboratories to find the radiant secret. Ponce de Leon pierced the wilds of a continent to find the medical spring; men have dreamed of it and worked to obtain it through all the rolling ages. Yesterday a gentleman was petting his little child, and looking up he said: "I have found life's elixir. This is it. There is a tree there gnarled and twisted and half of its branches dead. No process could restore its symmetry and beauty, see at its root that young tree rising straight and lithe and beautiful. That is the elixir of life for the tree; this (patting the child's head) is mine. Why should men dream of a better arrangement when even the moon floats, the corpse of a dead world, all its energies exhausted, in space? There is, too, another elixir. There was once a blind man who, in poverty, wandered from city to city in Greece, and repeated to the people his stately verses. A hundred generations ago he fell back to dust, but the immortal elixir remains in his poems, and men, as they read, forget that when he wrote the poems he was old and bent and blind and poor, rather they fancy him as the immortal poems picture him, a winged soul, a subtle, glorified being to whom both men and gods owe an everlasting debt, because he rescued them from oblivion and made them living, speaking, radiant beings for all time to come. From all these things men can learn the lesson that there is no elixir through which men's lives may be preserved except such as they may throw off from brain and heart, that good deeds are men's only safeguard against forgetfulness and that it is useless to work much upon these old bodies of ours for they are but as clocks set up and wound to run a little season and then to grow still."—S. L. Tribune.

The latest thing in hotel bill of fare is an edible menu card. You select the dishes you want, and then while waiting for them you amuse yourself by leisurely eating up the bill of fare, it acting as an appetizer. It is the scheme of a London confectioner. He makes a thin sheet of sweetened dough, and after it has been baked he prints the menu upon it in ink made of chocolate.

A San Diego grocer kept a fine Maltese Thomas to kill off rats. Last Saturday night he was attacked by a giant tarantula and was found dead on Monday morning. The tarantula was subsequently captured and is now on exhibition at the Coronado Museum. It is four inches long.
